1 INTRODUCTION

The German Survey on Volunteering (FWS) is a representative survey on volunteering of persons aged 14 and older. Voluntary activities and the volunteering potential are recorded and can be reported among population groups and across regions. The survey on volunteering is the basic instrument for social accounting volunteering in Germany and is funded by the Federal Ministry of Family Affairs, Seniors, Women and Youth (Bundesministerium für Familie, Senioren, Frauen und Jugend: BMFSFJ).

Up to now, the survey has been conducted in 1999, 2004 and 2009. During these three waves the survey agency TNS Infratest Sozialforschung (1999 as Infratest Burke Sozialforschung) was responsible for the data collection and reporting. The first wave of the survey on volunteering was conducted in the 'Projektverbund Ehrenamt' (a project group on honorary office). It consisted of Infratest Burke Sozialforschung in Munich, the Institute for Sociological Analyses and Consultancy (Institut für sozialwissenschaftliche Analysen und Beratung – ISAB) in Cologne, the German Research Institute for Public Administration at the German University of Administrative Sciences Speyer and the Institute for Development Planning and Structural Research at the Universität Hannover. The Institute for Social Work and Social Education (Institut für Sozialarbeit und Sozialpädagogik – ISS) coordinated the second and the third wave from June 2003 to December 2010. The scientific supervision of the fourth wave, which is conducted in 2014, lies with the German Centre of Gerontology (DZA) since December 2011.

In this discussion paper the survey topics of the first wave of the survey on volunteering (FWS 1999) (Chapter 2) as well as information on the sample (Chapter 3) and on the survey method (Chapter 4) are presented. Additionally, contact and general information for data users (Chapter 5) and the survey instrument, including interviewer instructions and filter information (Chapter 6 and Appendix), are given.

2 SURVEY TOPICS

Information on the following topics has been recorded in the Survey on Volunteering 1999: (1) on the voluntary activities, (2) on the person and (3) on the context of volunteering.

1. Information on volunteering includes questions on volunteering in general as well as voluntary activities in fifteen societal areas, which are the basis for the calculation of the nationwide volunteering rate or area-specific rates. Additionally information on the importance of volunteering, on characteristics of the first activity (B1) and, if applicable, a second activity (B2) has been surveyed. If a person carries out several activities, the most time-consuming is selected as the first activity. It is known how many activities a person carries out; characteristics of a third, fourth or further activity have not been recorded. Further, the interest in expanding the volunteering (volunteers) and taking up an activity (at the time of the survey non-volunteers) has been surveyed, from which the volunteering potential is calculated. There is also information on earlier volunteering (for persons currently not volunteering) and on other volunteering in a wider sense (e. g., informal help).
2. Data on the interviewed persons include socio-demographic information, as age and sex, and socio-economic information, such as employment status and education, information on the nationality, on the value orientation, on the religion and on time expenditure.
3. Context information for volunteering has been recorded on organisational and regional contexts, as characteristics of the organisational framework of the voluntary activity and areas of improvement of volunteering conditions.

In Table 1 the topics and contents of the Survey on Volunteering 1999 in the survey instrument and their respective question numbers are given.

3 SAMPLE

The sample of the Survey on Volunteering 1999 is a representative landline sample of the resident population aged 14 and older. The telephone interviews were conducted in German, thus the survey is representative for the German speaking population of Germany. To achieve a sufficient sample size for every federal state for state-specific analyses, the sample has been stratified disproportionally according to the population of the states – apart from the smallest states Bremen and Saarland (the subsample of Bremen was combined with the subsample of Lower Saxony and the subsample of Saarland with the subsample of Rhineland-Palatinate). The sampling frame for the sample in 1999 was generated using a Random-Last-Digit-Method according to ADM-Standard (ADM: Arbeitskreis Deutscher Markt- und Sozialforschungsinstitute).

The sample of the Survey on Volunteering 1999 includes n=14,992 completed interviews. In every federal state 900 cases were recorded, accordingly the sample of nearly every state was stocked up (apart from the biggest states North Rhine-Westphalia, Bavaria, Baden-Württemberg and Lower Saxony incl. Bremen) (Figure 1). The survey was funded by the Federal Ministry of Family Affairs, Senior Citizens, Women and Youth (BMFSFJ) and a subsample additionally by the Robert Bosch Foundation (additional cases for the new federal states).

To calculate the volunteering indicators on the federal level a retrospective weighting is required (the weighting factors provided by Infratest Burke Sozialforschung balance according to federal state, size of municipality, sex and age group). Cases from highly populated states are viewed with relatively high weightings, cases from less populous states with relatively low weightings (Figure 2).

³ For Rhineland-Palatinate and Saarland a combined subsample was drawn as well as Lower Saxony and Bremen.

4 SURVEY METHOD

Data of the Survey on Volunteering have hitherto been collected in three waves, in the years 1999, 2004 and 2009, with telephone interviews by TNS Infratest Sozialforschung on behalf of the Federal Ministry of Family Affairs, Senior Citizens, Women and Youth (BMFSFJ).

The interviews of the Survey on Volunteering 1999 were conducted from the beginning of May until the end of July 1999. They took 15 to 50 minutes.

The methodological report (Rosenblatt, 2001b) of the first wave of the Survey on Volunteering is available from the website of the Research Data Centre of the DZA: <http://www.dza.de/fdz/deutscher-freiwilligensurvey/fws-dokumentation.html>. The main report (Rosenblatt, 2001a) also contains methodological information.

5 USE OF DATA

Anonymised micro data of the Survey on Volunteering 1999, 2004 and 2009 are available as Scientific Use Files (SUF FWS 1999, SUF FWS 2004, SUF FWS 2009) for secondary analysis. Scholars working at a university or a research institution as well as students aiming at an academic graduation (as Bachelor, Master and PhD candidates) can receive the data free of charge from the Research Data Centre of the DZA (FDZ-DZA) (www.fdz-dza.de). Data can only be used for scientific research.

Regarding questions on data use, you can contact us via email: fdz@dza.de.

Data of the fourth wave of the German Survey on Volunteering are collected in 2014 and will presumably be available for external users via the FDZ-DZA in 2016.

6 SURVEY INSTRUMENT

In the following the CATI template for the telephone interviews of the first wave of the Survey on Volunteering in 1999 is documented. This template is based on the GESIS version ZA3350⁶ of the Data Archive of the Social Sciences (April 2014).

⁶ Data of the three waves of the Survey on Volunteering 1999, 2004 and 2009 were available at the Data Archive of the Social Sciences of the GESIS – Leibniz-Institute for the Social Sciences in Cologne.
